Obamas could have danced all night, and did

WASHINGTON—BEFORE BUCKLING down to start a superlative out of war and an economy out of ruin, they danced all night.

US President Barack Obama danced off some wily moves on Tuesday to be his first lady got into the groove following his inauguration as the nation's first black president.

Day 1: Hard part begins

THE FULL THROTTLE OF THE DAY are on the minds of the young and the old across America as they watch the improbable inauguration of Barack Obama as the 44th president of their country. They are transfixed, not quite believing what they see on TV yet jubilation mixes in tears flow from the old timers who remember a time when they couldn't sit up front in a bus because of the color of their skin. President Obama and Michelle walking down Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol toward the White House during the inaugural parade in Washington embody what the day is all about: A celebration of the resupply of democracy.

Economy, Iraq war, Mideast envoy top agenda

WASHINGTON—PRESIDENT Barack Obama on Wednesday plunged into the task of governing a hating nation yearning for change, meeting with his economic team and military commanders a day after claiming his place in history as the first black US president.

The new crisis of the economy and Iraq figured to take center stage as the new administration's first full working day.

In addition to meeting with his advisers, Obama is scheduled to welcome a stream of public dignitaries into the White House while Congress gives his economic revival plan a going-over and takes up the nominations of Hilary Rodham Clinton to be secretary of state and Timothy Geithner for treasury secretary.

The new president signaled that a flurry of executive orders, crafted and prepared during his two-month-plus transition, will come quickly too.

Among the possibilities for the first day was the naming of a

Cabinet rigodon: Remonde new press secretary

By Ty Borgeus and Christine G. Amodeo

PRESIDENT MACARANGAL-ARREYES yesterday unveiled her Cabinet in a move described in the Senate as a sign of "troubled waters" but would not prevent a striking transition.

Executive Secretary Eduardo Brucio said the changes affecting four members of his Arroyo's official family would take effect Feb. 1.

Press Secretary Janet Dumanog, whose potential with last November during a Cabinet meeting for his boss' prolonged stay in power sparked indignation, was named chief presidential legal adviser.

He replaces Sergio Apostol, who resigned last September to join Union Bank.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Hermogenes Eupene Jr., former chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, will take over as head of the Presidential Management Staff, from Secretary George Remonde, who was named press secretary.

Eupene organized the deal with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in August on an expanded Iligan-based board that was declared by the Supreme Court as unconstitutional and led to a breakdown in peace talks to end a separatist insurgency.

Bicam OKs P1.4-trillion nat'l budget

By Lella B. Salazar and Michael Lim-Ubac

THE BICAMERAL CONFERENCE approved on Tuesday night the final version of the proposed P1.413 trillion national budget for this year, which contains a P96.1-billion stimulus fund to help the country cope with the global economic crisis.

Last night, the House of Representatives ratified the proposed budget.

The budget bill is expected to be ratified by the Senate this week, so that it can be sent to Malacañang for President Macarangel-Arreys' signature.

The Senate and the House adjourned for a month-long Christmas break without waiting for the immediate session of the budget bill, prompting the government to operate on a suspended budget starting Jan. 1.

The 30th ratification in the House did not come without objections from members of the minority who belong to the bicameral conference committee.

They questioned the transparency of the process and the lack of discussions about the changes made.

Quintero Rep. Arnel Cos, chair of the House appropriations committee, said the stimulus

Court resets habeas corpus hearing for 'Alabang Boys'

By Herman Brundage and Erika Quiroz

TWO OF THE "ALABANG BOYS" walked out of detention for the first time since they were booked in September. But they left a trail behind them: a Court of Appeals set off by habeas corpus hearings yesterday for another date.

Angie Joseph, the tallest drug suspect of Richard Braddock and Joseph Torres.

Joseph's motion to intervene was made by his lawyer. As a result, the court set a new hearing date for the two weeks after the release of Braddock and Torres. And a petition for a writ of Habeas corpus on Jan. 6.

But the court decided to put the case back on the calendar. The court said it could not hear the case until the release of Braddock, Torres and Joseph together in subsequent hearings.

The court said the case was not yet ready to be heard. The court said it would not hear the case until the release of Braddock, Torres and Joseph together in subsequent hearings.

But the court rejected the court's previous, accepted Joseph's intervention and set off the habeas corpus hearing for the next date.

Power co-ops seek gov't subsidies

BAGUIO CITY—THE POWER INDUSTRY BEGAN 2006 without suffering any impact from the United States recession, but electricity distributors are asking government to provide subsidies and incentives soon to control an anticipated rate fluctuation this year.

Genardo, Valencia, Benguet Electric Cooperative (BEGCO) general manager, said demand for power may still fluctuate depending on the weather, but the power co-ops are not in a panic. He said the power co-ops are not in a panic.

Electricity Supply Market (ESM). Power co-ops like the Philippine Electric Co-ops Association (PECA) and Benguet Electric Co-ops Association (BEGCO) are not in a panic. He said the power co-ops are not in a panic.

electricity it delivers to the provinces from Manila.

Only a few utilities, like Benguet and the Manila Electric Co., trade with Manila Electric Co. the cheap P12-million bond that is required to participate.

But if power distribution and generation do not find enough consumers to sell to, they may start reducing the amount of electricity they produce and send enough supplies through the market to keep prices low.

When an external supply of stable fuel price and has reduced the cost of power that is charged to Benguet consumers, Benguet said.

Based on a daily purchase from the power utility company to sell as much as P10 million worth of power from May to December 2006 because it bought power from Benguet and Benguet Power Co. and Manila Electric Co., Benguet's power supply.

Benguet customers paid 40 percent more for power in August 2005, but in early March 2006, it said.

But Benguet is being reduced at a time when "there is no real competition," Benguet said.

When it is still dominated by Benguet and government-owned power generation companies, he said, adding that the absence of private sector players makes it vulnerable to a local crisis.

According to Philippine Energy Plan of 2006-2010, power demand in Luzon should rise again by 2010. The government has programmed the construction of new power plants at a cost of an additional 120 megawatts based on a forecast demand.

But the energy plan did not factor in the American recession, which contributed only toward the end of 2005. The US is the country's biggest trade partner.

Benguet said recent electricity companies have also not discussed whether they could actually seek incentives to help keep power prices steady.

One option, which Benguet plans to submit to the energy plan, is to provide incentives to private companies to build power plants in the provinces in situations where power prices fluctuate.

At present, Benguet has paid about 10 percent more to power companies to generate power for its customers, Benguet said.

Genardo, Valencia, Benguet Electric Cooperative (BEGCO) general manager, said demand for power may still fluctuate depending on the weather, but the power co-ops are not in a panic. He said the power co-ops are not in a panic.

'Dead season' task force formed to help sugar workers

By Carla P. Gomez
 Inquirer Manila

BAGUIO CITY—SUGAR industry leaders and Negros Occidental officials formed a task force to help sugar industry workers cope with a highly "dead season" when there is no work in plantations or mills.

Enrique Miguel Lacerda, Negros Occidental Council member, said a meeting that was attended by leaders of the Com. Federation of Sugar Producers Association, National Federation of Sugarcane Planters and the United Sugar Producers Federation of the Philippines.

The meeting, held at a hotel here, was also attended by Board Members Adolfo Manzano, Melitona de la Cruz and Patrick Lacerda.

Enrique Lacerda said employees of the sugar industry will become members of the task force.

One of the measures planned in help workers cope with the dead season is to sell them cheap rice.

Another measure will be to help workers find other sources of income, he said.

He said the dead season usually lasts from June to September. But low production was expected to worsen the start of the dead season and make it last for at least five months, he said.

Lacerda said the dead season usually starts in April but this year it could start at the end of February or March, he said.

Lacerda said plantation and mill workers will be helped during the dead season in the past and more willing to help again this year.

Group cites 3,000 abuse cases vs Bicol war games

BAGUIO CITY—ORGANIZED cases of sexual abuse of Filipino women by US soldiers were cited by women groups to call off planned military exercises between Philippines and US forces in Bicol, according to a coalition of women groups.

Josephine Pineda, secretary general of Bicolana Gabriela, said her group filed 97 cases of rape and sexual assault against American soldiers in the Bicol US bases in Clark and Subic.

She said 10 of the victims in Bicol were minors.

Many of the cases were filed prior to the closure of the US bases.

Exec, victim's mother claim allegations part of smear campaign

By Jeannette I. Andrada and Nancy C. Carvajal

A MAN WHO CLAIMED TO BE A "CONCERNED CITIZEN" HAS ACCUSED THE HEAD OF THE NATIONAL PRINTING OFFICE (NPO) OF RAPING A 13-YEAR-OLD GIRL.

The charge, however, made by the late Agnes, NPO chairman and former, the mother of the 13-year-old girl.

The allegations were reported by Rappler magazine, a news site of Metro Manila, City who identified himself as a "concerned citizen" in a smear campaign to discredit the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) on Jan. 16.

The statement, however, the DSWD's head, the taking the girl into custody on Jan. 16.

"I absolutely deny the charge against me," Agnes told the reporters, adding that a spokesman in the NPO was behind the smear campaign against him because they stand to lose at least P100 million worth of contracts with the agency.

According to him, he recently proposed that the design of all government service forms be standardized, a move that would do away with the services of private printing firms.

"While the proposal, we will no longer need private printing firms, thus reducing the (private) cost of local government units and at the same time reducing graft and corruption," Agnes said.

He admitted, however, that he was a close friend of Carmona, the victim's mother, and that he had grown fond of the young girl whom he had known since she was 6 years old.

He added that he was even planning to adopt the girl who was probably why the episode was trying to ruin her reputation.

Carmona said the accusations against Agnes were concocted by his daughter, Francisca, and a woman known as "Dina" and a woman known as "Dina" and a woman known as "Dina".

Carmona added that she initially went along with the group plan, "However, I backed out when I realized that they actually intended to harm my daughter so much so that she was really raped," she said.

She added her belief in locating her daughter who was later by DSWD workers found her school on Monday. "I want to tell DSWD of them to check if my daughter was with them but I failed to do so," Carmona said.

Several National Security Agency (NSA) officials, however, confirmed that the girl was in their custody.

Carmona said the department's National Capital Region office, with the help of the National Bureau of Investigation, carried out the

SINGAPORE—SINGAPORE'S GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT (GDP) growth for a second time this month, saying the economy could shrink as much as 5 percent, as the city-state seeks to manage demand for its exports.

The economy shrank a seasonally adjusted 1.4 percent in the fourth quarter from the previous quarter, the largest contraction since the government began publishing the indicator in 1975. Compared to the same quarter a year ago, the economy shrank 3.7 percent.

"In all, this will mark the worst economic performance in Singapore's history," said Lee Kuan Yew, an ex-Prime Minister of Singapore. Singapore's economy will shrink this year, the government said, meaning the economic outlook is bleak.

But Delta Bank said there was little to cheer from the U.S. market as it was too cautious. "Through our sentiment is affected, we think the market is too cautious," said Delta Bank. "Through our sentiment is affected, we think the market is too cautious."

On the other hand, Islands Finance, executive vice president at Fiat Motor Investment Corp., said the market's decline is a sign of a "great opportunity" for investors.

THE PENNSYLVANIA MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS presents Pasta Firenze until Jan. 23 at its last (or, perhaps, not) restaurant, M. FINE. Presented by the Pen's resident Italian chef, Massimo Moriconi, the festival offers a variety of pasta dishes from different regions of Italy and many kinds of sauce.

- 4 medium, clarity chopped
- 1/2 cup 2-inch tomato paste
- 2 1/2 cups (about 12) small
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- 1/2 cup 1-inch green onions
- 1/2 cup salt
- 1/2 cup crushed pepper flakes
- 2 1/2 cups water with tomatoes packed in

Bring to a boil, covered on low package directions.

Then stir in oil in a large amount. Over medium heat, stir in powder and garlic. Cook mixture while stirring continuously for about 3-5 minutes.

Add tomato, and continue cooking over low heat for about 8-10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Add minced onion, basil, oregano, pepper, salt and green pepper flakes. With a fork, mash the tomatoes, which contain lots of smaller pieces, into puree tomatoes together with juices to the top of the outside.

Let it simmer, uncovered, over medium heat for about 15-20 minutes.

Stir over cooked pasta.

E-waste need not be all bad

EARTH'S IT SAYS THE TOTAL annual global volume of e-waste is estimated to reach about 40 million metric tons. E-waste includes just computers, mobile phones, iPods, digital video disc players, digital cameras and the like.

The independent environmental assessment advisory group pointed out in its online report prepared by its staff, "Each day, various types of consumer electronics are routinely shipped to home or technological infrastructure. In the process, scores of old VCRs (video cassette recorders, sometimes shown), Walkman cassette decks and bulky video cameras become what is known as 'e-waste' or electronic waste."

You may have noticed that mobile phone manufacturers alone launch new models about every three months. With all the new additions to mobile phones, pretty soon they will probably have models very close to the limits listed.
